Specifically, the training will serve the three following objectives:

- Improve understanding of concepts of child labour,
- Enhance the capacity to use modern statistical software for data analysis purposes,
- Support the capacity to construct indicators to measure and monitor child labour.
- Strengthen the technical capability of counterparts to analyse and use child labour data for policy and programme design.

Objectives

The main objective of the course is to raise the capacity of national stakeholders, social partners, and staff from international organisations to analyse survey data on child labour. An additional and related objective is to support the design of well-informed policies in the area of child labour mitigation.

Course implementation

The course will last one week and will be held in Turin, Italy, at the ILO International Training Centre, which offers unique residential facilities in a site shared with other UN agencies. The training will rely on the development of a range of advanced training materials bringing together concepts and practical exercises based on survey data and the use of common statistical software.

The training methodology will balance in-service computer-based exercises with a group assignment. Practical exercises using modern statistical software will be carried out to familiarise participants with basic statistical analysis of child labour. The group assignment will consist of the preparation and presentation of a technical note which will analyse child labour issues. The training materials will build on the range of reference materials used by IPEC, UCW and ITC-ILC capacity building activities undertaken at the country and regional levels.

Language

The course will be conducted in English, therefore a good command of English is essential to fully benefit from it.

Target audience

The course would be intended to fit the needs of: (i) officials from national, regional or local governments with responsibility for producing and analysing labour market data; (ii) social partners working with data on child labour; and (iii) staff from international organisations responsible for the monitoring of child labour.

Methodology

The training will mix theory and practice. In addition to plenary sessions, group activities are foreseen to examine case studies and formulate practical recommendations. The course will seek to draw on the first-hand experience of the participants to the maximum extent possible, using this as a basis for country-specific analysis of different types of situations of child labour. The course will make a broad use of documents and materials published by IPEC on child labour, WFCL, labour inspection and administration, and occupational safety and health. Other techniques and media, such as video screening, will also be used.

At the end of the course participants will be requested to provide an evaluation of course methodology and content.

1. The International Labour Organization and the Italian Government established the International Training Centre in 1964 in Turin, Italy, as an advanced vocational training institute. It has since matured into a focal point for high-level in-service training. This takes place in Turin, in course participants’ home countries or via the internet. The Centre provides training and related services that develop human resources and institutional capabilities. We thereby contribute to achieving the ILO’s goal of decent work for women and men.

2. The ILO’s International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour (IPEC) was created in 1992 with the overall goal of the progressive elimination of child labour, which was to be achieved through strengthening the capacity of countries to deal with the problem and promoting a worldwide movement to combat child labour.

3. As part of broader efforts to develop effective and long-term solutions to child labour, World Bank, International Labour Organisation (ILO) and UNICEF, began the joint Understanding Children’s Work (UCW) project in December 2000. The project is guided by the Oslo Agenda for Action, unanimously adopted at the 1997 International Conference on Child Labour, which laid out the priorities for the international community for accelerating progress against child labour. The Agenda specifically identified the need to address the absence of reliable data on child labour, and called for improved capacity in child labour data collection and analysis.
